Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE

is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. effectually checks and arrests those too fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Caution.—Beware of Piracy and Imitations.

CAUTION.—"Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant FREEMAN was deliberately untrue, which he regretted to say had been sworn to."—See Times, 10th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None are genuine without the words "DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

"NEWS" OFFICE

PREFACE.

IN presenting to the Public the first issue of "The Shetland Directory and Almanac," the Publishers desire to state that every effort has been made to make it as full and accurate as possible. They are, of course, sensible that it is in some respects not so complete as they would have desired; but they are confident, from the fact of this being a first issue, that any defects or inaccuracies will be readily overlooked. Their endeavour to produce locally a work of reference exclusively devoted to the Islands has met with very gratifying encouragement and support, and to all who have assisted in its preparation, they would take this opportunity of returning their sincere thanks.

ANECDOTES FOR ALL READERS.

—o✱o—

On life's vast ocean diversely we sail.—POPE.

A FOOLISH young fellow, boasting in company of his travelling abroad, was asked by one present how he made his way. "By my wits," replied the other. "Indeed!" says he, "then you must have travelled very cheaply."

SOME Frenchmen who had landed on the coast of Guinea, found a negro prince seated under a tree, on a block of wood for his throne, and three or four negroes, armed with wooden pikes, for his guards. His sable majesty anxiously inquired, "Do they talk much of me in France?"

A CERTAIN Parisian preacher was holding forth, not much to the satisfaction of his audience. "He did better last year," observed Santeuil, the poet, who was present. A bystander asserted that "he must be mistaken, for that the present exhibitor had not preached at all the year before." "That is what I mean," answered the poet.

REUCHLIN, the celebrated author of "De Arte Cabalistica," having reached a village where he was obliged to wait for his carriage at an inn, filled with drunken obstreperous peasants, hit upon one of the strangest plans for silencing such an assemblage as was ever heard of. He called for a glass of water and a piece of chalk. With the latter he described on the table a circle surmounted by a small cross; on the right of this circle he placed the glass, on the left a knife, and in the very middle his book, and so began to read, at times uttering strange sounds. The peasants, taking him for nothing less than a sorcerer, held their tongues in amazement, and Reuchlin was thus enabled to read in peace till his carriage came.

AN English gentleman and his friend, travelling through a track of woods in one of the Western States, took with him an Indian lad as guide. In the course of the day they separated, and one of them, finding some curious berries, sent them to his companion by the lad, with a note specifying the number. The one who received the present found some of the berries missing, and, having reprimanded the boy for eating them, sent him back for more. The gentleman forwarded a second parcel, with the number again marked on the note. The boy played the same trick with these. This procured a second scolding. Whereupon the Indian fell down upon his knees, and kissed the paper, saying, "I found out the first time this paper was a witch or a conjurer; but now he has proved his power to be supernatural indeed; because he tells that which he did not see; for when I ate the last berries, I took care to slip the note under a stone, that it might not know what was passing."

On Knowing One's Friends.

Said a thief to a wit, "There's no knowing one's friends
Until they've been tried and found steady."
Said the wit to the thief, "All yours,
I presume,
Have been tried and found guilty already."

A MAN the other day received a letter; he knew the handwriting; he wanted to read it in haste—it was already dark, he struck a light, tore a piece of paper, and lighted a candle, but the letter was gone.—He had used it to light the candle!

THE clerk of a country club, who was a schoolmaster, being called on to give a toast, produced the following:—"Addition to the friends of Old England, Subtraction to her wants, Multiplication of her blessings, Division among her foes, and Reduction of her debts and taxes."

WHEN Baron Nieuman was once playing at cards in a large company, he was guilty of an odd trick, on which the rest of the players, being extremely angry, threw him out of the first-floor window into the street. The Baron, meeting Foote some time after, was loudly complaining of their usage, and asked what he should do. "Do!" replied Foote; "why, never play so high again."

DINING one evening with a friend, Wilkie Collins, the novelist, spoke of the difficulty of imagining a place or character which had not its original in real life. After he had described the house in "Armadale," a gentleman called upon him, and upbraided him for putting his residence into print. The description was exact, although Wilkie Collins had never seen the place. He invented a man who was so careful about his food that he weighed it in little scales at the table. A gentleman was introduced to Mr. Collins, and said—"You had no right, sir, to caricature me. I weigh my food in little scales, sir. Here they are, sir. I always carry them about with me. But is that any reason why I should be held up to ridicule, sir?" In vain Mr. Collins protested that he had never before heard of such a habit.

A NOTED juggler perceived, at the commencement of his performances, that he was very narrowly watched by a gentleman whom he knew to be a very acute observer. He was embarrassed, and he felt that he could not practise his deceptions with his usual free and easy hand. The consciousness of being thus watched distracted his mind, and prevented him from concentrating its energies upon one object. The juggler, therefore, gave this gentleman a piece of money, telling him that he must look out, or he would get it away from him in the course of the evening. At the conclusion of the exhibition the gentleman said to the juggler: "Well, Sir, here is your money; you see that I have kept it safely."—"Yes," replied he, "and I meant that you should, for I chose that you should have something else to watch besides me."

BRIGHT EYES.

As a fainting flower
Is revived by a shower,
Whose soft drops fall o'er it,
And gently restore it,
Ere ever it dies;
So the heart of Medoro
Recovers its lightness,
And banishes sorrow
Because of the brightness
Of thy young eyes.—Metastasio.

THE HAND OF THE DILIGENT MAKETH RICH.

—o✱o—

Order is heaven's first law.—POPE.

AN inhabitant of Perugia, who was much in debt, was walking along the street with a very melancholy air. Someone asked him what was the cause of his melancholy. "I am in debt," said he, "and I have nothing to pay."—"Well," said the other, "let your creditors think of that."

A GENTLEMAN in Surrey once held a farm worth £200 a year in his own hands, till he was obliged to sell half of it to pay his debts, and let the other half to a farmer, on a lease of twenty-one years. After a while the farmer wanted to buy the land. "How is this," said the gentleman, "that I could not live upon the farm, being my own, while you have paid rent, and yet are able to purchase it?" "Oh," said the farmer, "two words make all the difference: you said go, and I say come; you lay in bed, or took your pleasure, and sent others about your business; and I rise betimes, and see my business done myself."

THERE are no qualities which succeed so well in this world as selfishness and strict honesty. It pays to be honest. There is nothing heroic about it. And there is nothing heroic about the success of the self-made man who takes all his chances and leaves his younger brothers and sisters to shift for themselves. The young man who stays at home in order to help those near him to rise from the slough of poverty is the hero. He is unselfish. We cannot gauge success by what appears to be success. If money-making were the real test of success, we should have no heroes. We should have no priests, no religions, no philanthropists, no poets, no orators. That man is truly successful and truly heroic who strictly performs his duty. The man who strains every nerve and sinew to make money is laying up for himself an old age of regret.

INSIGNIFICANT as the manufacture of dolls' eyes may appear, it is well known to keep in employ several thousand hands. Mr. Osler, an intelligent manufacturer of Birmingham, gave the following statement before the Committee of the House of Commons in 1824:—"Eighteen years ago, on my first journey to London, a respectable-looking man in the City asked me if I could supply him with dolls' eyes, and I was foolish enough to feel half offended; I thought it derogatory to my new dignity as a manufacturer to make dolls' eyes. He took me into a room quite as wide, and twice the length of this' (one of the large rooms for Committees in the House of Commons), "and we had just room to walk between the stacks, from the floor to the ceiling, of parts of dolls. I saw enough to convince me that he wanted a great many eyes. As the article appeared quite in my line of business, I said I should be glad to take his order, and it came to upwards of five hundred pounds."

A CERTAIN amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against the wind. Even a head wind is better than none. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm. Let no man therefore wax pale because of opposition.

NOT the least of the troubles of a busy man is to protect himself, as he sitteth in his home or goeth about the ways of the world, from the great banditti of the idle. Does an idle man like conversation? he obtains it, not from some man equally yawning and vacant with himself, but from some active and well-replenished mind, which cannot properly spare him a moment, though he generally contrives to take an hour.

"WHEN I was a lad," says one, "an old gentleman took some trouble to teach me some little knowledge of the world. With this view, I remember, he once asked me when a man was rich enough. I replied, When he has a thousand pounds. He said, No.—Two thousand? No.—Ten thousand? No.—Twenty thousand? No.—A hundred thousand? which I thought would settle the business; but he still continuing to say No, I gave it up, and confessed I could not tell, but begged he would inform me. He gravely said, When he has a little more than he has, and that is never! If he acquires one thousand, he wishes to have two thousand; then five, then ten, then twenty, then fifty; from that his riches would amount to a hundred thousand, and so on till he had grasped the world; after which he would look about for other worlds to possess."

"I OWE my success in business chiefly to you," said a stationer to a paper-maker, as they were settling a large account; "but let me ask how a man of your caution came to give credit so freely to a beginner with my slender means?" "Because," replied the paper-maker, "at whatever hour in the morning I passed to my business, I always observed you without your coat at yours." I knew both parties. Different men will have different degrees of success, and every man must expect to experience ebbs and flows; but I fully believe that no one in this country, of whatever condition, who is really attentive, and, what is of great importance, who lets it appear that he is so, can fail in the long run. Pretence is ever bad; but there are many who obscure their good qualities by a certain carelessness, or even an affected indifference, which deprives them of the advantages they would otherwise infallibly reap, and then they complain of the injustice of the world. The man who conceals or disguises his merit, and yet expects to have credit for it, might as well expect to be thought clean in his person if he chose to go covered with filthy rags. The world will not, and cannot in general, judge but by appearances.—T. Walker.

SHADOWS.

A zephyr moves the willow trees,
  And straightway o'er the grass
The shadows of their branches shift—
  Shift, love, but do not pass.

So, though with time a change may come
  Within my steadfast heart,
The shadow of thy form may stir,
  But cannot, love, depart.

DUELS AND DUELLISTS.

—o✱o—

Beware of entrance to a quarrel.—SHAKESPEARE

THERE were 172 duels in England during the reign of George III., and there have been several trials of duelling peers for murder by the House of Lords.

THE duel is a survival of the trial by ordeal. Rowland Yorke is supposed to have brought it to England in 1587, but earlier than that it was not unusual to see a glove hung over the altar in church as a challenge to anyone who should take it down.

COBBETT, when challenged to fight, recommended the challenger to draw a Cobbett in chalk upon the wall; and if he succeeded in hitting it, to send him instant word, in order that he might have an opportunity of acknowledging that, had the true Cobbett been there, he, in all probability, would have been hit too. But hit or no hit, the bullets could have no effect whatever, he maintained, on the original causes of the quarrel.

M. DE MALSAIGNES was a determined duellist. Having quarrelled with a brother-officer, they agreed to fight out the dispute in the very room where it took place, when M. de Malsaignes' adversary managed to run him through the body, and nail him against the door. "This is all very well," said the transfixed duellist, "but, pray, how are you to get out?"

IN 1808 M. de Grandpré and M. de Pisque, who had quarrelled, agreed to fight a duel in balloons. They ascended in two balloons from a field near the Tuileries, armed with blunderbusses. The balloons kept about eighty yards apart, and when they were 800 feet high, on signal being given, Pisque fired. He missed aim, and then Grandpré fired into Pisque's balloon, and he and his seconds were dashed to pieces on a housetop.

IN 1765 occurred a celebrated duel between the father of the poet Lord Byron and Mr. Chaworth, a famous duellist. They quarrelled at a club dinner at the "Star and Garter," Pall Mall, about game; Chaworth was a great game preserver, and Lord Byron had argued upon the cruelty and impolicy of the game laws. They agreed to fight in an adjoining room, by the light of only one candle. Lord Byron entered first; and as Chaworth was shutting the door, turning his head round, he beheld Lord Byron's sword half undrawn; he immediately whipped his own weapon out, and making a lunge at his lordship, ran it through his waistcoat, conceiving that his sword had gone through his body: Lord Byron closed, and, shortening his sword, stabbed Mr. Chaworth in the belly. The challenge had proceeded from Chaworth. Lord Byron read his defence to the House of Lords, and was found guilty of manslaughter.

One Good Service.

Here lies a man who into highest station
By dint of bribes and arts contrived to slide;
And ne'er one service rendered to the nation,
Except the lucky day on which he died.

IN Louis XIV.'s time the actress Maupin insulted a lady at a ball, and was ordered out of the room. She said she would go if the gentlemen who espoused the lady's cause would meet her outside. "After a hard combat," so the account runs, "she killed them all, and quietly returned to the ballroom."

THE last duel in England between British subjects was fought at Southsea in 1845, when Lieut. Hawkey, who had a cause of quarrel with Lieut. Seton of the 11th Hussars, killed him in combat. Two Frenchmen, however, fought a duel at Egham as recently as 1851.

DR. MEAD and Dr. Woodward fought under the gates of Gresham College. Woodward's foot slipped, and he was at the mercy of his opponent. "Take your life!" exclaimed Dr. Mead. "Anything but your physic," retorted the prostrate man.

THE late M. Thiers had a duel with an enraged father who insisted upon Thiers marrying his daughter, with whom he had fallen in love at Aix when a student, refusing to grant a second delay. The father involuntarily lowered his arm as he was firing, and the bullet passed between the legs of M. Thiers, whose clumsy position saved him.

FRENCH duels have constantly assumed an epidemic form. In the seventeenth century Louis XIII. signed 8,000 letters of pardon in twenty years. Richelieu arrested the practice by a vigorous act. The Comte de Chapelle and the Duc de Bouteville had fought a duel in the Place Royale in Paris. They were tried and beheaded.

THERE is a record in 1813 of a duel between Fournier and Dupont that lasted nineteen years! They agreed, by treaty, to meet when within a hundred miles of each other, and they had some desperate sword combats. One day Dupont said, "We must end this quarrel." He wanted to get married, and proposed pistols. Fournier, who was a crack shot, said he was mad. They arranged to meet in a wood, have two shots each, and fire from behind trees. Dupont drew his enemy's two shots by stratagem, and then spared his life.

MISSES by experts are not uncommon. A crack shot was seen knocking over puppet targets one after the other. A bystander said he could not do as much on the ground. He obliged him with a meeting. The crack shot fired first, and missed. "I told you so," jauntily exclaimed his opponent, humming the operatic air of "Così fan tutti" as he walked away. M. Charles Maurice, a crack shot, was once missed by a veteran duellist, who murmured something his seconds overheard. Was he not muttering a prayer? "Quite right; I was making a vow to the Virgin never again to aim at the head."

THE POET.

He walks along the common shore
His sober brethren travel o'er;
They only strive to grasp and greet
Whate'er the waves wash to their feet.
He hears a strange sweet melody,
From unseen isles far in the sea;
And tries to sing with tuneful tongue
The songs that unto him are sung.
They praise him for his wondrous art;
But ever in his inmost heart,
How far apart he knows with tears,
The songs he sings, and those he hears.

PAINTERS AT WORK AND AT PLAY.

—o✱o—

Art may err, but nature cannot miss.—DRYDEN.

RAPHAEL and Titian painted a man in a fever, and the painting was so naturally and artfully executed that a physician, on looking at the picture, declared at once that the original must have been sick of a quartan fever.

THE temper of Zucchero the painter was strongly tinctured with resentment, as will be seen by the following anecdote related of him. Zucchero, while employed by Pope Gregory XIII. to paint the Pauline Chapel in the Vatican, fell out with some of his Holiness's officers. To be revenged, he painted their portraits with ears of asses, and exposed the picture publicly over the gate of St. Luke's Church, on the festival of that Saint, the patron of painters. For this gross affront he was compelled to fly from Rome, and hide himself in obscurity, far beyond the reach of his indignant enemies.

VERNET, the famous painter, was so attached to his profession that he used to make voyages in bad weather on purpose to see the sky and ocean in picturesque perturbation. One day the storm was so violent that the ship's crew were in great consternation. Vernet desired a sailor to bind him to the mast. When everyone was crying and praying, Vernet, with his eyes now upon the lightning, and now upon the mountainous waves, continued to exclaim, "How fine this is!"

DOMENICHINO the painter was accustomed to act the characters of all the figures he would represent on his canvas, and to speak aloud whatever the passion he meant to describe could prompt. Painting the martyrdom of St. Andrew, Caracci one day caught him in a violent passion, speaking in a terrible and menacing tone. He was at that moment employed on a soldier who was threatening the saint. When this fit of enthusiastic abstraction had passed, Caracci ran and embraced him, acknowledging that Domenichino had been that day his master; and that he had learnt from him the true manner to succeed in catching the expression, that great pride of the painter's art.

JOHN GRISSIER (landscape-painter), known amongst amateurs by the name of the Gentleman of Utrecht, formed the singular resolution of living always upon the sea; he bought a vessel with accommodation for himself, wife, and children. He sailed continually along the Dutch coasts, always in his floating house, and in these voyages he painted most beautiful landscapes and marine views. His fortune proved the inconstancy of his favourite element; he was frequently wrecked, and saw his whole property swallowed twenty times by the merciless waves, without wishing to change his mode of life.

TURNER spent hours upon hours in mere contemplation of Nature, without using his pencil at all. It is said of him that he was seen to spend a whole day, sitting upon a rock, and throwing pebbles into a lake; and when at evening his fellow-painters showed him their day's sketches, and rallied him upon having done nothing, he answered them—"I have done this, at least; I have learnt how a lake looks when pebbles are thrown into it."

MORTIMER was employed by Lord Melbourne to paint a ceiling at his seat of Brocket Hall, Herts, and taking advantage of permission to angle in the fish-pond, he rose from a carousal at midnight, and seeking a net, and calling on an assistant painter for help, dragged the whole preserve, and left the fish gasping on the bank in rows. Nor was this the worst; when reproved mildly, and with smiles, by Lady Melbourne, he had the audacity to declare that her beauty had so bewitched him he knew not what he was about.

A NOBLEMAN, on some provocation or other, having threatened the celebrated Hans Holbein (painter to King Henry VIII.) with death, the painter immediately went and complained of him to the king, who sent for the nobleman and charged him, at the peril of his life, not to meddle with Holbein. On this the nobleman desired his Majesty to consider the difference between a peer and a painter. "The difference, my lord," replied the king, "is this—I can easily of seven ploughmen make seven nobles, but out of seven times seven noblemen I cannot make one Holbein."

ADRIAN BROUWER, the eminent Dutch painter, was pleasant, facetious, and witty in his cups, and was a strong advocate for a short life and a merry one. Resolving to proceed post-haste to his grave by the help of brandy, he arrived at his journey's end when he was only thirty years of age. On his death-bed he asked for a goblet of water, which he drank, saying, "We must reconcile ourselves to our enemies when we are dying."

TENIERS, perceiving that the works of painters sold much dearer after the deaths of their authors, wisely determined to anticipate the reversionary profits of talent, and, to effect this, thought he could not adopt a better expedient than to cease to live to the public. In order to execute this singular stratagem he absented himself from the town of Anvers, and his wife and children counterfeited affliction by putting on black. The trick succeeded, and in a very short time all the works of the pretended deceased were bought up at very high prices!

Be Magnanimous.

How great thy might let none by mischief know
But what thou canst by acts of kindness show:
A power to hurt is no such noble thing;
The toad can poison, and the serpent sting.

LOVE'S TYRANNY.

Why like a tyrant wilt thou reign,
When thou mayst rule the willing mind?
Can the poor pride of giving pain
Repay the joys that wait the kind?

I curse my fond enduring heart,
Which, scorn'd, presumes not to be free,
Condemn'd to feel a double smart,
To hate myself, and burn for thee.

THE SWEETEST EYES.

Which are the sweetest eyes
to you?
The brown, where fire and languor meet,
The sunny, laughing eyes of blue,
Or black, with glances shy and fleet?

Or opaline, with changeful hue,
Or grey, where mind with beauty vies,
Or violet, so soft and true—
Tell me which are the sweetest eyes?

My darling bent her sunny head,
Her radiant face seemed half divine,
"The sweetest eyes to me," she said,
"Are those that look with love in mine."

THE FARMER.

My lord rides through his palace gate,
My lady sweeps along in state,
The sage thinks long on many a thing,
And the maiden muses on marrying;
The minstrel harpeth merrily,
The sailor ploughs the foaming sea,
The huntsman kills the good red deer,
And the soldier wars without a fear,
But, fall to each whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

LAWYERS, JUDGES, AND PRISONERS AT THE BAR.

—o✱o—

Still you keep o' the windy side of the law.—SHAKESPEARE.

A COUNTRYMAN driving a load of firewood to sell, called aloud, "Guarda! guarda!" (take care). A coxcomb not willing to make way, was struck by the man, and his cloak was torn. Determined to make him pay for it, the gallant instantly took the clown before a magistrate, who heard the cause of the complainant, and turning to the countryman asked if it was true, but received no answer. The magistrate, addressing him of the cloak, said, "What would you have me do with one that is dumb?" "Dumb! he is not dumb; it is not a minute ago since he was calling, with all his might, guarda! guarda!" "Then if he did call out," said the magistrate, "you ought to have taken care, and your cloak would not have been torn."

THE following is a specimen of Sir W. Maule's way of addressing a jury:—"Gentlemen, the learned counsel is perfectly right in his law. There is some evidence upon that point. But he is a lawyer and you are not, and you don't know what he means by some evidence, and so I'll tell you. Suppose there was an action on a bill of exchange, and six people swore they saw the defendant accept it, and six others knew him intimately and swore to his handwriting. And suppose, on the other side, they called a poor old man who had been at school with the defendant forty years before and not seen him since, and he said he rather thought the acceptance was not his writing; why, there would be some evidence that it was not. And that is what the learned counsel means in this case."

A BANK note had been stolen out of a letter; it was traced to the bank, the clerks of which said they had paid it to a young man that very much resembled a person who was at the General Post Office. This was a strong presumption; to make it, however, much stronger, the character of the young man was inquired into, and it appeared by the evidence of his brother clerks that he lived in a manner superior to what they could afford, and that he had often told them that they did not live well enough for him. This had great weight with the jury; he was convicted and executed. It appeared, soon after his execution, that the young man had lived in the most frugal manner, to support his aged mother, and that to prevent his being teased by his young friends for not living in the way they did (which would have completely put a stop to his exertions in favour of his mother), he had recourse to an untruth, which terminated, so fatally and disgracefully, a benevolent, virtuous, and useful life, tainted only, as was perhaps natural at his years, by a little foolish vanity.

A Natural Change.

The following stanza was written by the famous Theodore Hook, on a house once occupied by a lawyer which had become a smith's shop:—

"The house a lawyer once enjoy'd
Now to a smith doth pass;
How naturally the iron age
Succeeds the age of brass."

JASON MAGNUS was a celebrated lawyer of Pisa. One day, being engaged in a cause with another lawyer of the name of Socin, and finding himself somewhat embarrassed by his adversary, he took it into his head to fabricate a law at the moment, which gained him his cause. Socin perceived the trick, and as he was not less cunning he immediately overturned Magnus's reference by another not less precise. Jason, who had never heard of such a law, insisted that Socin should declare where it was to be found. "It is to be found," replied Socin, "in the next chapter to that you have just referred to." Lorenzo de Medicis, who was present, much applauded this repartee, and the whole assembly were entertained by this novel kind of argument.

IN the spring of 1746 an elderly woman gave information against her maid for coining, and the trial came on at the Old Bailey. The mistress deposed that having been left a widow several years ago, with four children, and no possibility of maintaining them, she had taken to coining: that she used to buy old pewter pots, out of each of which she made as many shillings, &c., as she could pass for three pounds, and that by this practice she had bred up her children, bound them out apprentices, and set herself up in a little shop, by which she had got a comfortable livelihood; that she had now given over coining, and indicted her maid as accomplice. The maid in her defence said, "That when her mistress hired her, she told her that she did something up in a garret into which she must never inquire: that all she knew of the matter was, that her mistress had often given her moulds to clean, which she did, as it was her duty: that, indeed, she had sometimes seen pieces of pewter pots cut, and did suspect her mistress of coining; but that she never had had, or put off, one single piece of bad money." The judge asked the mistress if this was true; she answered, "Yes;" and that she believed her maid was as honest a creature as ever lived; but that, knowing herself in her power, she never could be at peace; that she knew by informing she should secure herself; and not doubting but the maid's real innocence would appear, she concluded the poor girl would come to no harm. The judge flew into the greatest rage, told her he wished he could stretch the law to hang her, and feared he could not bring off the maid for having concealed the crime; but, however, the jury did bring her in not guilty. Horace Walpole, who relates this story to one of his correspondents, adds, "I think I never heard a more particular instance of parts and villainy."

HOME SONG.

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest ;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest,
For those that wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care :
To stay at home is best.

* * * * *

Then, stay at home, my heart, and rest ;
The bird is safest in its nest ;
O'er all that flutter their wings and fly
A hawk is hovering in the sky :
To stay at home is best.—Longfellow.

TALK ABOUT TALKING.

Words of love are works of love.

THE greatest barkers are not the greatest biters.

NEVER argue with any but with men of sense and temper.

IF you will only keep quiet, you can think anything you please.

WE often repent of what we have said, but never of that which we have not said.

Dare to be true; nothing can need a lie. A fault which needs it must grow two thereby.

IT is never the opinions of others that displease us, but the pertinacity they display in obtruding them upon us.

NATURE has given us two ears, two eyes, and but one tongue, to the end we should hear and see more than we speak.—Socrates.

THE man who spends most of his days in giving advice to his friends has no need at all to lie awake nights wondering why he isn't popular.

He that will lose his friend for a jest deserves to die a beggar by the bargain. Yet some think their conceits like mustard, not good except they bite. Such let thy jests be that they grind not the credit of thy friend.—Fuller.

WHEN people come to see us, we foolishly prattle, lest we be inhospitable. But things said for conversation are chalk eggs. Don't say things. What you are stands over you the while, and thunders so that I cannot hear what you say to the contrary.—Emerson.

CHARITY of speech is as divine a thing as charity of action. The tongue that speaketh no evil is as lovely as the hand which giveth alms. To judge no one harshly, to misconceive no man's motives, to believe things are what they seem to be until they are proved otherwise, to temper judgment with mercy, surely is quite as good as to build churches, establish asylums, and to found colleges.

A COMPANION that is cheerful and free from swearing and scurrilous discourse is worth gold. I love such mirth as does not make friends ashamed to look upon one another next morning; nor men, that cannot well bear it, to repent the money they spend when they be warmed with drink. And take this for a rule: you may pick out such times and such companions, that you may make yourselves merrier for a little than a great deal of money; "'Tis the company, and not the charge, that makes the feast."

DEAN SWIFT says, the common fluency of speech, in most men and most women, is owing to a scarcity of matter and scarcity of words; for whoever is a master of language, and hath a mind full of ideas, will be apt, in speaking, to hesitate upon the choice of both.

BE checked for silence, but never taxed for speech.—SHAKESPEARE.

LOVE, knavery, and necessity make men good orators.

POLITENESS is like air cushions; there is nothing in it, but it eases the jolts of life wonderfully.—Willis.

THE first ingredient in conversation is truth; the next, good sense; the third, good humour; the last, wit.

WIT is brushwood, wisdom is timber. The first makes the brightest flame, but the latter the most lasting heat.

STUDY gives strength to the mind; conversation, grace. The first is apt to give stiffness, the other, suppleness.—Sir W. Temple.

THAT is the happiest conversation where there is no competition, no vanity, but a calm, quiet interchange of sentiment.—Dr. Johnson.

IT is a difficult matter to make a good impromptu. I believe, for my own part, that none are good but those that are made at leisure.—Southey.

HARMLESS mirth is the best cordial against the consumption of the spirits; wherefore jesting is not unlawful if it trespasseth not in quantity, quality, or season.

WORDS must be fitted to a man's mouth. It was well said of the fellow that was to make a speech for my Lord Mayor, he desired to take measure of his lordship's mouth.—Selden.

THE soul of refined conversation is the same as the soul of refined manners—namely, good-will toward others, and a desire to secure their comfort and increase their happiness. This great law underlies all the rules on this subject. The authoritative putting of this law is—Do as you would be done by.

GOOD conversation is flowing and natural. It is neither heavy nor frivolous; it is learned without pedantry, lively without noise, polished without equivocation; it is made up neither of lectures nor of epigrams. Those who really converse, reason without arguing, joke without punning—skilfully unite wit and reason, maxims and sallies, ingenious raillery and severe morality. They speak of everything in order that everyone may have something; they do not investigate too closely for fear of wearying; questions are introduced as if by-the-bye, and are treated with rapidity. Precision leads to elegance, each one giving his opinion and supporting it with a few words. No one attacks wantonly another's opinion, no one supports his own obstinately. All discuss in order to enlighten themselves, and leave off when dispute would begin; everyone recreates himself, and all go away contented.

A Contented Mind.

In crystal towers and turrets richly set
With glitt'ring gems that shine against the sun,
In regal rooms of jasper and of jet,
Content of mind not always likes to won (dwell);
But oftentimes it pleaseth her to stay
In simple cotes enclosed with walls of clay.

THE KISS OF THE SEA.

A yellow stretch of rippling sand,
Curved by the bay to two gold lips;

Ah, look! the blue sea slyly slips,
Faint, frothing up the shingly strand—
Just takes the kiss, and then for fear
Reflows, but ebbs to reappear.

The sea shells strewn around sing low
The secret sea things that they know.

F. G. Linwood.

WISE SAWS FROM SCOTLAND.

The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in their proverbs.—LORD BACON.

FIRST come, first served.
Changes are lightsome.
Forewarned, half armed.
Folk canna help a' their kin.
A taking hand never wants.
Fat hens are aye ill layers.
Fairest flowers soonest fade.
Foul water will slocken fire.
Come unca'd sits unsair'd.
Enough is as gude as a feast.
Fou o' courtesy, fou o' craft.
Fancy flies before the wind.
Every season has its reason.
Fair exchange is nae robbery.
Fair words butter nae parsnips.
Fire maks an auld wife nimble.
When lairds break, carls get land.
Fair words winna mak the pat boil.
Far behind maun follow the faster.
Farest frae the kirk, aye soonest at it.
A rich mouthfou, and heavy groans.
A safe conscience maks a sound sleep.
Force without foresight is little worth.
Gie a dog an ill name and he'll soon be hanged.
An ill penny will cast down a pound.
When ae door steeks, anither ane opens.
Feather by feather the goose is plucked.
Every ane for himsel, and God for us a'.
Be not a baker if your head be o' butter.
Ease and honour are seldom bedfellows.
Aft counting keeps friends lang thegither.
A spur in the head is worth twa in the heel.
When the tod preaches, tak care o' the lambs.
Changing o' words is a lightening o' hearts.
Dochters and dead fish are ill-keeping wares.
Every man's tale is gude till anither's tauld.
A wall between baith best preserves friendship.
Courtesy is cumbersome to him that kens it not.
Dogs that bark at a distance ne'er bite at hand.
Fire and water are gude servants but ill masters.
What may be done at ony time is done at nae time.

QUIETNESS is best.
Never is a lang term.
Malice is aye mindful.
Ne er say Go, but gang.
Rob Peter to pay Paul.
Threatened folk live lang.
Make a virtue o' necessity.
The e'ening brings a' hame.
Ripe fruit is soonest rotten.
Wha canna gie will little get.
Tarry lang brings little hame.
Ne'er strive against the stream.
Mak the best o' a bad bargain.

IT'S nae shift to want.
Let byganes be byganes.
Ill herds make fat wolves.
Lightly come, lightly gang.
Hardships seldom come s'ngle.
Leave aff while the play's good.
He that gaes saftly, gaes safely.
It's gude to be out of harm's way.
Little winning maks a light purse.
Handle your tools without mittens.
Let ilka herring hing by its ain head.
Hanging is nae better than it'sca'd.
Keep your tongue within your teeth.
May-bee was ne'er a gude honey bee.
Birds o' a feather aye flock thegither.
It's time to cry Oh, when ye're hurt.
Lang and sma, gude for naething ava.
Little can a lang tongue lein (conceal).
Let the morn come, and the meat wi't.
Brag o' a fair day when night is come.
He that seeks trouble seldom misses it.
By chance a cripple may catch a hare.
Better to live in hope than die in despair.
Keep your mouth shut and your een open.
Biting and scarling is Scotch folks' wooing.
Listeners ne'er heard a gude tale o' themsels.
He that wants to strike a dog ne'er wants a stick.
Keep your ain grease for your ain cart-wheels.
He that repents a gude act turns gude into ill.
It's an ill turn that patience winna overcome.
He that plants trees lo'es ithers beside himsel.
In youth and strength think of age and weakness.
He that's ill to himsel will be gude to naebody.
He that pleads his ain cause has a fool for his client.
Nae man can live at peace unless his neighbours p'ease.
He that laughs at his ain jokes spoils the sport o' them.
Keep the head and the feet warm, and the rest will tak nae harm.
"It's ower now," quo' the wife, when she swallowed her tongue.
Hang a thief when he's young, and he'll no steal when he's auld.
"Amaist" and "Very near" hae aye been great liars.

The Poet.

Let me, for once, presume to instruct the times
To know the poet from the man of rhymes;
'Tis he who gives my breast a thorn and pains;
Can make me feel each passion that he feigns;
Enrage, compose, with more than magic art,
With pity and with terror tear my heart;
And snatch me o'er the earth, or through the air,
To Thebes, to Athens, when he will and where.
HORACE.

Tell nae tales out o' the school.
They're aye gude that's far awa.
Nineteen naesays is half a grant.
Mony cooks ne'er made gude kail.
Now is now, and Yule's in winter.
Three can keep a secret if twa be awa.
Travellers' words are no aye to be trusted.
Ne'er let on, but laugh in your ain sleeve.
Ne'er show your teeth unless you can bite.
Ane beats the bush, and anither grips the bird.
The richer the souter, the blacker his thumbs.
The banes o' a great estate are worth the picking.
Our bosom friends are sometimes our backbiters.
They ne'er saw dainties that think a haggis a feast.
As ye use your parents, sae will your children use you.
There's aye a glum look where there's cauld crowdie.
Bachelors' wives and maidens' bairns are aye weel bred.
There ne'er was a silly Jockey but what there was a silly Jenny.
The reek o' my ain house is better than the fire o' my neighbour's.

"THE POET IN A GOLDEN CLIME WAS BORN."

—o✱o—

Come, give us a taste of your quality.—SHAKESPEARE.

EXCEPTIONAL.

THOUGH sages swear, "Without a cause
There's no effect"—it's mockery;
There are exceptions to all laws,—
Who breaks domestic crockery?

UNREASONABLE.

WHY frowns my fair?—The mighty bliss
Was paid with equal smart;
I rudely stole a rapturous kiss,
I paid thee with my heart.

HUMAN LIFE.

BEHOLD the child, by Nature's kindly law,
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw:
Some livelier plaything gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty quite:
Scarfs, garters, gold amuse the riper sage,
And beads and prayer-books are the toys of age;
Pleased with this bauble still, as that before,
Till tired he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er.

OLD AGE.

AGE is the heaviest burden man can bear,—
Compound of disappointment, pain, and care;
For when the mind's experience comes at length,
It comes to mourn the body's loss of strength;
Resigned to ignorance all our better days,
Knowledge just ripens when the man decays;
One ray of light the closing eye receives,
And wisdom only takes what folly leaves

In Courts of Law.

Once, says an author, where I need not say,
Two travellers found an oyster in their way;
Both fierce, both hungry, the dispute grew strong,
While, scale in hand, Dame Justice passed along.
Before her each with clamour pleads the laws,
Explained the matter, and would win the cause.
Dame Justice, weighing long the doubtful right,
Takes, opens, swallows it before their sight.
The cause of strife removed, so rarely well,
Then take, says Justice, take ye each a shell.

THE SUNFLOWER.

AH, sunflower! weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the sun,
Seeking after that sweet golden clime,
Where the traveller's journey is done—

Where the youth pined away with desire,
And the pale virgin, shrouded in snow,
Arise from their graves, and aspire
Where my sunflower wishes to go.

WOMANKIND.

WHEN Eve brought woe to all mankind,
Old Adam called her woman;
But when she woo'd with love so kind,
He then pronounced her woo-man.

But now with folly and with pride,
Their husbands keenly trimming,
The ladies are so full of whims,
The people call them whim men.

AN APT COMPARISON.

THE snake, tradition's tale avers,
Casts once a-year his speckled skin;
Yet no improvement change infers—
'Tis still the self-same snake within.

Too like the supple courtier's trim,
Who turns and twists, occasion's slave;
'Tis change of sides, not change of him!
New knavery—but the same old knave!

THE ARDENT LOVER.

O TELL me not, with groundless fear,
That bending to some other beauty,
I may forget you once were dear,
And vow to her my tender duty.

No, loveliest! no; for though the youth
Who sees thy charms may break for ever
All former vows of plighted truth,
Faithless again shall he be never.

THE CLOWN'S REPLY.

JOHN TROTT was desired by two witty peers
To tell them the reason why asses had ears.
"An't please you," quoth John, "I'm not given to letters,
Nor dare I pretend to know more than my betters;
Howe'er, from this time, I shall ne'er see your graces,
I really believe, without thinking of asses."

POSSESSION.

AN evil spirit's on thee, friend! of late,
Even from the hour thou camest to thy estate:
Thy mirth all gone—thy kindness—thy discretion,
The estate has proved to thee a most complete possession.
Shame, shame, old friend! wouldst thou be truly blest,
Be thy wealth's lord, not slave!—possessor, not possessed.

TIME AND LOVE.

TIME and love are ever foes,
Following still a different aim;
Where the rosy tyrant glows
Steals old Time, and damps the flame.

Angry Love a vengeful blow
Oft inflicts, as rage inspires,
And, where Time has scattered snow,
Joys to wake the rebel fires.

Men in every age and clime
Equal still their triumphs prove;
Oft from Love forgetting Time,
Oft from Time forgetting Love.

LAST WORDS.

GANE were but the winter-cauld,
And gane were but the snaw,
I could sleep in the wild wood-,
Where primroses blaw.

Cauld's the snaw at my head,
And cauld at my feet,
And the finger o' death's at my een,
Closing them to sleep.

Let nane tell my father,
Or my mither sae dear,
I'll meet them baith in heaven
At the spring o' the year.

LORDS AND COMMONS.

—o✱o—

Let all the ends thou aimst at be thy country's.—SHAKESPEARE.

JAMES I., mounting a horse that was unruly, said, with an oath, "Sirrah, an ye be na quiet, I'll send ye to the five hundred kings in the House of Commons: they'll soon tame you."

A NEWLY-ELECTED M.P. lately consulted his friend as to the occasion that he should select for his maiden speech. A very important subject was suggested, when the modest member expressed a fear that his mind was hardly of sufficient calibre to embrace it. "Pooh! pooh!" said the friend, "don't be under any apprehensions about your calibre: depend upon it, they will find you bore enough."

LORD CHATHAM (when Mr. Pitt) on some occasion made a very long and able speech in the Privy Council relative to some naval matter. Everyone present was struck by the force of his eloquence. Lord Anson, who was no orator, being then at the head of the Admiralty, and differing entirely in opinion from Mr. Pitt, got up, and only said these words,—"My lords, Mr. Secretary is very eloquent, and has stated his own opinion very plausibly. I am no orator, and all I shall say is, that he knows nothing at all of what he has been talking about." This short reply had the effect of making the Council immediately determine against Mr. Pitt's proposition.

SIR BOYLE ROCHE (the Irish member) was a staunch courtier, who voted uniformly on the Ministerial side, and it was universally allowed he did it more essential service by his address than many others of equal zeal, and perhaps greater ability. "I wish," said he, one day, when opposing an anti-Ministerial motion, "I wish, Mr. Speaker, this motion at the bottom of the bottomless pit." At another time, in relation to English connection, he observed—"England, it must be allowed, is the Mother Country, and therefore I would advise them [England and Ireland] to live in filial affection together like sisters, as they are and ought to be!" A question of smuggling practices in the Shannon being under consideration—"I would," said Sir Boyle, "have two frigates stationed on the opposite points at the mouth of the river, and there they should remain fixed, with strict orders not to stir; and so, by cruising and cruising about, they would be able to intercept everything that should attempt to pass between." These effusions never failed to excite laughter; but though that national figure of speech, vulgarly called a bull, was that in which he most delighted to indulge, and which flowed most naturally from his tongue, he sometimes rose to the height of pointed satire and repartee.

On a Ducal Plagiarist.

A Duke once declared—and most solemnly too—
That whatever he liked with his own he would do.
But the son of a duke has gone further, and shown
He will do what he likes with what isn't his own.

MR. FOX having applied to a shopkeeper in Westminster for his vote and interest, the man produced a halter, with which he said he was ready to oblige him. The orator immediately replied, "I return you thanks, my friend, for your very polite offer; but I should be sorry to deprive you of so valuable a family piece."

AN orator, in the Irish House of Commons, was describing the inordinate love of praise which characterised an opponent. "The honourable member," said he, "is so fond of being praised that I really believe he would be content to give up the ghost, if it were but to look up and read the stone-cutter's puff on his grave."

A YOUNG but ambitious M.P. of the beginning of this century, having long resolved upon attempting some speech which should astonish the House, at last rose solemnly up, and, after three loud hems, spoke as follows:—"Mr. Speaker, have we laws, or have we not laws? If we have laws, they are not observed; to what end were those laws made?" So saying, he sat down, his chest heaving high with conscious consequence; when another rose up, and delivered his thoughts in these words:—"Mr. Speaker, did the honourable gentleman who spoke last, speak to the purpose, or not to the purpose? If he did not speak to the purpose, to what purpose did he speak?" It is needless to describe the roar of laughter with which the House was instantly shaken, or to say that the orator never spoke again in that place.

THERE used to be a house, called "The Jew's Harp," situated near to the top of Portland Place. Mr. A. Onslow, when Speaker of the House, was wont to go to this house, in plain attire, and take his seat in the chimney-corner in the kitchen, joining familiarly in the humours of the customers, and was for two or three years a great favourite with the landlord, his family, and visitors, who, not knowing his name, usually spoke of him as "The Gentleman." Mr. Onslow being seen one day in his state carriage going to the House by the landlord, mine host was somewhat alarmed at the discovery, and hurried home to tell his family what he had discovered, which disconcerted them not a little, knowing with how little ceremony they had hitherto treated him. The Speaker came as usual in the evening to the "Harp;" but finding, from the reserved manners of the landlord, his wife, and the children, who were accustomed to climb upon his knees, and take liberties with his wig, that his name and character had become known, paid his bill, and never afterwards returned to the house.

OUR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT.

—o*o—

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin.—SHAKESPEARE.

CHINGIS KHAN, the first Tartarian emperor, being defeated in an engagement, and seeing himself closely pursued, crept into a bush to hide himself, where he was no sooner laid than an owl perched upon the top of it; which, when the pursuers saw, they neglected the search of that bush, supposing no man was there where so timorous a bird sat securely; by which means Chingis preserved his life. In memory thereof the Tartars hold an owl in great veneration.

A CERTAIN knight of Spain, as high in birth as a king, as catholic as the Pope, and equal to Job in poverty, arriving one night at an inn in France, knocked a long time at the gate, till he had alarmed the landlord. "Who is there?" said the host, looking out of the window. "Don Juan Pedro," replied the Spaniard, "Hernandez, Rodriguez de Villanova, Count of Malafra, Knight of Santiago and Alcantara."—"I am very sorry," replied the landlord, shutting the window, "but I have not rooms enough in my house for all those gentlemen you have mentioned."

Two Arabians once sat down to dinner; one had five loaves, the other three. A stranger, passing by, desired permission to eat with them, which they agreed to. The stranger dined, laid down eight pieces of money, and departed. The proprietor of the five loaves took up five pieces, and left three for the other, who objected, and insisted on having one-half. The cause came before Ali, who gave the following judgment:—"Let the owner of the five loaves have seven pieces of money, and the owner of the three loaves one; for, if we divide the eight loaves by three, they make twenty-four parts: of which he who laid down the five loaves had fifteen, whilst he who laid down three had only nine; as all fared alike, and eight shares was each man's proportion, the stranger ate seven parts of the first man's property, and only one belonging to the other; the money, in justice, must be divided accordingly."

IN Costa Rica no labourer ever passes a lady in the street without lifting his hat, and he always touches that dirty and generally dilapidated portion of his apparel when a gentleman passes him. If a lady approaches a group of men digging a cellar or repairing the street, or what not, even though some of them may be half naked, they always salute her respectfully, and in the rural districts no one ever meets you without saying, "May God prosper the object of your journey," or "May Heaven smile upon your errand," or something in Spanish like that. The same man will swindle you out of your eye-teeth if he gets a chance; and if you ask him how far it is to the next place, he will undoubtedly tell you a falsehood. But with his lips he recognises a beautiful custom.

On a famous Historian.

The muses to Herodotus, one day,
Came, nine of them, and dined;
And in return, their host to pay,
They left a book behind.

THE Dutch may be compared to their own turf, which kindles and burns slowly, but which, when once kindled, retains its fire to the last.

THE Chinese live in houses where the supply of air is so limited that no European could endure the vitiated atmosphere; yet they are a very healthy nation. This is due probably to the fact that their food is invariably simple, and clean and thoroughly well cooked. Meat, potatoes, and rice are all boiled together. When cooked, the mixture is put into small bowls; and as it is eaten with tiny chopsticks, it is impossible to try the mouth or stomach by scalding them with a quantity of very hot food. Moreover, they rarely drink water if they can get tea, either hot or cold.

MANY of the natives of India have such a superstitious dread of the wolf that they will not kill it, nor aid in slaying it, nor mention its name, lest, if its blood be shed, they may bring evil on themselves or their children. As wolves do a great deal of mischief in various parts of the country, this stupid habit is doubly unfortunate. Sir Joseph Fayrer describes an ingenious plan that was adopted for getting rid of a large wolf that had destroyed several people. A nawab or governor in Oude had a trap set for the animal, which was perfectly well known in the district, and caught it. Out of regard for the native prejudice, he did not kill it. Instead, he had a good-sized bell hung around its neck, and set it at liberty. In a few days it was found dead. The bell had acted as a signal of its approach; and as every creature fled as soon as it heard the noise, the man-eater was starved to death.

IT is the custom in Russia to place a corpse, on the night before the burial, in the church, where the priest, accompanied by a chorister, is obliged to pray. It once happened in a village, to the amazement of the priest, the corpse suddenly arose, came out of the coffin, and marched up to him. In vain the priest sprinkled him with holy water; he was seized, thrown to the ground, and killed. This story was related on the following morning by the terrified chorister, who had crept into a corner and concealed himself. He positively added that after having perpetrated the crime, the dead man laid himself down in the coffin again. He was really found so. Nobody could conceive how this murder could have been committed. At length, after a lapse of many years, it was discovered. A robber, who among many other crimes confessed this also, had slipped in the dark into the church, put the corpse aside, and taken his place in the coffin. After perpetrating the crime, he had put everything in order, and then retreated without being perceived.

Notes for the Farmer.

It is illegal for anyone to set traps on his land with strong-smelling baits, or to expose poisoned food for birds or beasts.

Gleaners have no right in law as gleaners.

A man is not bound to fence in his land; but if the public have exercised a right of way across it for 20 years, the right cannot be taken from them.

Notes on Wills.

A will must be in writing, signed at the end by the testator or by his authority, and witnessed by at least two persons, who must write names and places of abode.

The testator must be of age. A will does not require a stamp.

An executor must distribute a testator's property within a year of the death.

When a man dies without a will and without children, his wife takes half the personal property, and the next of kin the other half. When there are children, the wife takes one third, and the children the rest.

An illegitimate child cannot take under the term "children." The eldest son takes the freehold property, if the father dies without a will. A married woman cannot make a will without her husband's consent. Marriage revokes a will, so does its mutilation or destruction by the testator in the presence of another person or the making of another will.

MY FIRST VOYAGE TO THE HAAF.

———: o :———

(An Experience of Fifty Years Ago—Written in the Vernacular of those Times.)

[BY AN UNST FISHERMAN.]

DA mont o May set in wi unca aitrie wadder[1]. Beltan Ree cam aboot da twalt, an for a whole ook it luiked as if it wid be a onlay. Da grund i da mornins wis covered wi a fivvle o snaa[2]. Da very breer wis hattered black i da wista[3]. Aboot da twa-an-twentied, da wadder began ta faa, an took im inta a kind o windy byenter[4]. Sae wir skipper, Magnus o Vendieshoull, sent me wird dat at da back o da helly we sud gaing huil an huilbaand[5] ta da lodge. I set me till an drew ower my packie o tows, mended da guirdastaurie o my scalve[6], cut an rexed da tar ledder o da grice for humbliebaands, feddered twa pair o hewks, filled a sneevie pin[7] wi tarrie wupins, an ony laek smaa thing at needed sortin. My midder scoored my new jup, an hang er furt ta sook, an sorted my socks an mittens. Weel, a' Sunday da wadder wis muckle da sam—blawin a gude rinnin frae da sud-waast, sae aboot sinset I laid me in ower i da bed ta get a bloint o sleep, bit dae wir a kind o an amp[8] apo me a' nicht, an juist aboot da turn o da dim I rises an stramps furt. Da wadder wis dauchin'd[9] a gude dael, an muggled im inta a stumba o wet dagg[10]. Says I ta mi midder,

"Mam, rise di wis up an mak me some brakfist, for I tink he's gaun ta be sea wadder."

"Haud di tongue, boy," says shu; "wha tinks doo wid tak a renkie aff o da laand[11] dis time o da year? Believe doo me, dis is only a slud atween wadders."

"Weel, dat may be," says I; bit it widna be a fairlie if he sud dauchin i da stu[12] for twartrie days, come ta dis day o da year.'

"Doo'll better lay de doon a peerie start yet," says Mam; "an I'll creep me up an kirn da tip o milk, sae dat doo may get a fluin o butter[1] furt wi de."

Sae I lays me in ower da bed, an faas upo a dwam, an began ta draem. I tought I wis gaen alangst da nort banks, an as I wis stridin roond a scaavie[2], my fit strick a peerie toog an awa I tumbles headie-craw ower da bank. I fell an fell, lipnin every moment ta be dozed among da caavies. My feelin I canna describe. I wis a' in a vimer wi a undumious yewk adoon da sma o my back. Weel, juist as I wis comin ta da bodom, a great muckle white fool comes laavin inunder me,—an' wi dat sam da soond o Mam kirnin, an da claug o wir clockin fluckner[3] wauken d me. Da sun wis noo come in trow da ben lozin[4] wi a gludder, sae oot I jimps an stramps furt. Da first dat I meets is Tammie o Nort'ouse, rubbin oot o his een. Says he,

"Boy, doo's no sleepid sae lang as some o wis. What tinks doo o im i da mornin?"

"It's juist baith da wys lik," says I; "he's a puishin wadder head; a dirty saule i da sea[5]; an I dunna laek dis und o haet, an da uel risin oot o da grund. Wir a' seen an atrie muind comin oot o da laek o dis."

"Doo shurely minds e're-fern-year[6], aboot dis sam time, whin da men o Braken cam vaan[7] o der tows, an nearly misfaul'd i da string o da Urkie."

"I mind dat weel enouch, an fur my pairt I widna gaeng oot ower da door da day, bit wir men seemed anxious ta mak a drawin doon—be-me-sang, sees doo yon whillie rowin ower da puil! it's no anidder een bit wir men comin wi der traps, sae I'll gae awa in an mak upa me."

"Weel, weel, Gude be wi de," says Tammie; "I'm gaen ta be laek da men o Hoversta—bide till I hear wird."

"Haith, I wid better bide tu, man. I widna cared if we'd haed bait. Da twartrie

My skin jup an barmskin[7] ar abun da but-door. Da dorrow wi da skoags an a pair of bregdin keys[8] ar hingin at da fit o da inby cupple. My packie o tows is upo da looder o da mill, an da vaarline bow[9] (buoy) is hingin upo da stoop o da tatie lodie."

By da time I wis finished my brakfist, my buddie wis ready, sae wi my packie o tows rived atween my shooders, an da buddie upa da tap o it, I taks laeve o Mam an awa I gaengs doon da banks gaet. I couldna help tinkin o my draem, bit as my midder aye teld me dat ta draem o white things wis a gude omen, I felt dat da white fool (fowl) i my draem wis da kind haand o providence preservin me i da midst o danger. I noo sees da lodge reekin, sae I kens dat wir men haed come trow.

Whin I comes inta da lodge, da skipper wis sittin wi a viscal o gloy[10] windin fytlins for da cappies. Robbie o Vaaland an Jockie o Hamar wis repairin da bink[11] an sortin da ringalodie[12], while Henry o Viggie wis sittin wi a yarkin alishen[13] shodin da rackie. Lowrie o da Cru wis trampin aboot da door, castin glances aroond da lift, seemingly in an ill-plaesed mood. Says da skipper ta me,

"Boy, tak de wis da watter keg an gaeng ta da green wall an fill im, an mind ta swill im oot."

"Whaar's da keg," says I ta Lowrie.

"He's lyin afore da fiskafel[1] i da oost room o da saxerin."

Weel, awa I gaings an fills da keg, an lays im i da suremil[2]. Noo whin I comes in da skipper says,

"Boys, I'll tell you what it is. I tink we'll try ta weet da tows, an hae a set if it wis bit oot da lent o da Vords."

Da twartrie pilticks i da skyoe ar noo faan apon, bit de'll du for saide bligs[3], an it'll gaeng ill ta wark if we canna yaag twartrie saide pilticks.

"Weel," says Lowre! "Gude guide de an sae wis a, bit I'm no seen some o you sae aabir whin hicher shines[4]. Be-me-sang, der as vogerous follows as eider de or me setin da fit afore dem i da mornin."

"Dat may a' be," says Maansie; "bit I see you a' as graam (anxious) an as kibbie (clever—grasping) as I for your pairt whin we come ashore. Sae nae mair aboot it, bit lit iz draw doon i da name o Gude."

Wi dat sam every een taks his bulgaments an awa we gaengs ta da shaar (boat). Takin frae da shords, which consisted o da croon bane o a whaal an da rut o a raga-tree[5], we set wir backs till er, gettin da eft drawil on a oak lin weel smeered wi rotten droo (decayed sea-weed), an at da wird o commaand frae Lowrie, whaa wis takin afore, we a' poo'd tagedder an doon shu cam withoot even makin a stick.

Lowrie, whaas' saet wis eft upo line-burd, jimps in ta stow da gear. Da packies o tows wir first haandid in an laid be-eft da oost room fiskafel i da shot. Da drink keg wis laid afore da baand. Da haandline reels wir set i da fore staamerin, an da grind wi da skoags, da skuins (knives) an da glaan (whetting-stone) wir a' laid i nabert (bait) locker i da eft room. Every man noo took his place, set in his humblie-baands, an laid oot his raemick (oar). We turns da shaar wi da sun i da right coorse, an dan da skipper says,

"Noo, boys, Gude haud His haand aboot wis."

Very little wis spoken intil we got oot da Nort Soond, whin Lowrie throw in raemick an stuid upo da eft tilfer. Says he,

"Boys, if what's aboot im comes, as he's lik, we'll sune hae a shange o wind."

[1] Beginning to get sour. When fish is caught it is fresh; when a day old it is dowed; when beginning to get sour it is vomed; and when smelling it is said to be draavin. [2] Stir or hurry.

[3] Wandering slowly—daundering.

[4] Whole baggage or luggage—sea outfit. (Sounded with a "y" in some districts).

[5] Smoke that makes the eyes water.

[6] Crossbacks, or rafters. [7] Apron of sheep skin.

[8] Bits of wood made in the form of keys, used for platting four strands of twine into a cord for fishing line, called bregded scoag. [9] An extra buoy & buoy-rope.

[10] Gloy—straw prepared for making sim-minds, or straw ropes. Viscal—a small quantity of straw. [11] Bench, or turf seat.

[12] The fire pot or kettle, together with the links and hooks for suspending the same over the fire. [13] A small awl.

[1] Fish board, or partition across the room of a boat to retain the fish.

[2] Shore, or landing-place of boat.

[3] Bait for saithe. [4] Higher shines—when the day or season is farther advanced, or at its height.

[5] Root of a fallen tree.

"Da carry is comin frae a nor-wast," says Lowrie; an if he hings up dat wy it widna be a fairlie if he sud be mauchtly thro da swaar o da dim[1]."

"Doo says da carry is comin frae da nor-wast," says Lowrie; "dat's a' da werr sign, for, be-me-sang, he's sookin it till im. Ony een at haes een i der head can see dat dis is only a loor atween wadders—we'll hae an ungastu (contray wind) afore sin-risin."

"I dunna lik yon und alang da nort banks," says Jockie; "an dae wir ower mony brynics (mock-suns) aboot him i da mornin ta be lang gude."

Very little wis mair said till we cam be-fram Vordadaal, whin Maansie proposed dat we sud haud better oot an wast till we got da Stack i Slaggie an da Daa at da Stickie, an dere hae a shot ta da boddim.

"I never saw muckle gude dere," says Lowrie; "if we wir oot da lent o da Stack at da Suilick an da Ooverburg at da Runie, I widna say bit we wid get da grip o a mamick, an dan if der ony saide i watter we sud feel im dere."

Lowrie's plan wis taen, an in a short time we wir at da seat. Mansie an Lowrie wir ta rin ta boddim for ling, an Jockie an Henry wir ta shut for saide.

"Haand me a kippick o pilticks[2]," says Lowrie.

"Be-ye-blithe," says Robbie; "no ae een is in er."

We noo fan oot dat we haed left da bait pilticks i da skyoe. Da taen blamed da tidder, till at lent Lowrie says,

"What's da uis o irpin aboot a thing eens dat it's dune? Rex me da skuinie an glaan."

Lowrie noo poos oot da lap o his jup an snee'd (cut) aff a tivlick (tag) o white claith. He fixed dis by da damp (end) ta his saide huke, an haddin up his strange bait he spat on it, utterin da wird, "I wee." He shot da line an began yagg. It wisna lang till he felt im, an shune we haed plenty o gude bait.

"Noo, boys," says Mansie; we'll lay tu da sail an haud oot efter, an by da time wir da lent o da auld grund, da aest tide 'ill be saagin[3]."

Da wind wis noo blaain a gude rinnin frae da sud-wast, sae by da time we haed snee'd da nabert an aeten a bite o bread, we wir at settin grund. Da bow an burop wis thrown owerbuird, an Lowrie an Jockie began ta set. By da time dat da fort packie wis dune, we haed ta sueinonder[4].

[1] Dead of night.

[2] 4 pilticks banded together with a straw. 2 pilticks—1 baand: 4 pilticks—1 kippick.

[3] Saagin—ceasing to flow; i.e., the short period of still water while the current changes from east to west.

[4] To retard the boat's motion—to back.

"Haand me a cappie," says Lowrie "da deilie span gaengs mair oot ower her side da nicht."

"I daarsay doo's richt," says Mansie; "he's no lik ta dauchin i da stu."

"Doo'll maybe ken dat er shu comes in," replies Jockie; "some o wis is no sae vogerous for umplists[1] o dis kind."

By dis time we cuist da fraamer bow bent ta vaarline. It noo took fower o wis ta andoo. Lowrie an Robbie got on der skin jups an barmskins, an made for hailin, bit juist as we wir lyin till er da vaarline bruke, an da bow ged doon wi da russie o da tide[2].

We hanvayged (hovered) aboot for maistlins a oor, bit never saa da bow again. We couldna shaa ae inch o sail, da wind wis sae strong, an nae weight (ballast) i da shaar. We manned da raemicks an set wis till er ta andoo ahead. We rowed awa, seven lang an seven short[3]. Every noo an dan shu wis takkin da green ludder[4] in ower da forehead. Noo whin we haed rowed until da turn o da dim, Mansie bids me gaeng awa i da forehead an look oot ower da waster side, for, says he,

"Wha kens, doo'll maybe see da inner bow."

I wisna been lang until I toucht dat I saa da oomund[5] o sometin i da ask (haze) hewast wis. Rubbin da saat watter oot o my een, I taks a gude look an what does I see bit da bow.

"Der shu is," says I; "a burop lent fram an wast."

"Gude lit de see a gude sight apo dysel," says Lowrie; "puir aamis ting."

We noo got haud o da bow, an began ta hail. Da first dat comes upo da steid huke wis a muckle skate. We wir na lang hailin, for ye see we haed afore da wind. Da wadder wis sae dat we never wid tried er, haed it no been ta get some weight i da boat, for no ae ought haed we bit twartree gaupins o eleepie stanes.

Whin we wir gotten in da tows, Mansie proposes dat we sud close reef da rae (sail), an lay da shaar's head ta da aestward. Dis wis dune, bit puir sailing we haed. Da spuind o da sea ged ower wis, an it took twa o iz—een wi a owskary an een wi a fiddock—ta keep er wi lee watter.

We didna sail lang till we pat er aboot, an stuid ta wast'ard, wi bow-kegs filled wi saut watter an da muckle skate hung ta da wadder kabe. We haads at her a while, dan da ask lumed up an we saa da caavies.

[1] An outburst of rough weather.

[2] Russie—rush or flow of water, hence roost.

[3] To wait or work an indefinite time; a long and wearisome time.

[4] The rush of broken water, spray or foam, blowing in over the boat when pitching into a heavy sea.

[5] To see somethlng dimly in the haze.

We haed da Holshyler at da Wilmer, an da Stoorascord o Widwick ower Fadaman's Stack.

Da sea wis noo come ta dat at dey wir nae livin ava. Mansie wis headin a lump whin we never kens till da wadder raebaands made up (broke), an da sail tuer, an noo dey wir naethin for it bit ta andoo as lang as we wir able. Jockie haed a straw buddie, sae we ties da cappie stanes intill im and rins im doon wi da burops, an what tink ye it made a winderfil odds. It keepid wir head ta wind. Da buddie wi da sea bannocks wis a' weet, an da bread wis in a sirpa1

Weel, ta mak a lang tale short, we andowed awa lik dis till oot upo da day, whin da rain hained an da wind banged ta wast wi a perfect gandaguster.2

We noo hauls in wir fastie, an mends da sail wi revatwiries, an set it upon er, an awa we gaengs wi a bit o sheet aff. We ran brawly weel, until we wir crossin da String o da Braagie. whin a lump strack wis be-eft da shot an cairried awa twa packies o tows an a half a score o ling. Da boat wis filled ta da hadabaands, bit we dang da head oot o da drink keg an emptied er. Weel, as Gude wid hae it, we got safe ta laand juist whin da wives wis pakkin in da buricks (cows).

Wir ain folk wis been rinnin aboot da banks a' day, never tinkin ta see wis again. Bit, Gude be tanked, it wis eider wyes for dat time.

1 Steeped soft by water. 2 A sudden dry gust of wind after rain.

NOTE.—Fishermen thought it unlucky to apply land names to things at sea. For example, they would have called the Wife, faar; Boat, shaar; Mast, stong; Sail, rae; Land, the caavies; Church, banehouse—(house of bones); Minister, upstandee; Precentor, yarmer; Whale, fyeadin; Cow, burick; Dog, baener—(bone-eater); Broken, made up; Lost, gone to itself; Wind, stu; Contrary wind, ungastu; End, the damp; &c.

SHETLAND PONIES.

A popular belief exists among Southern schoolboys that anyone is at liberty to catch, if he can, the ponies that live among the hills, and ride them as he pleases. This ideal time, as is proved by the following Act, did not exist in the sevententh century,and if the schoolboy of that day had attempted to make free with the steeds of the country, he would have been mulcted in his pocket-money to an alarming extent. Scott, who evidently shared this very popular fallacy, gives in "The Pirate" an amusing account of a ride over a Shetland scathold, which should be read by everyone interested in the sheltie. In it he says, "When any passenger has occasional use for a pony, he never scruples to lay hold of the first which he can catch, puts on a halter, and, having rode him as far as he finds convenient, turns the animal loose, to find his way back again as he best can—a matter in which the ponies are sufficiently sagacious."

In 1612 the following statute was passed by the Court sitting at Scalloway :—

"Act for Ryding uther mens horsis and stowing of thair taillis.

"Item it is statut be the said reverend father in God (the Bishop of Orkney) with advyse and conseil foirsaid for remeid of ryding uther mens horsis that quhasoever sall be apprehendit ryding ane uther manis hors without licence and leave of the awner inwith the parochin quhair the awner of the horse duellis sall pay to the Kingis Shirref or deput four merks and to the partie awner iiij merks. And gif he be fund and apprehendit ryding ane uther mans hors outwith the parochin quhair the awner of the hors duellis he sall pay viij merks to his Maiesties deput and viij merks to the partie. And gif it sall be tryed and fund that the ryder and taker of the hors hes over-riddin ma parochins for everie parochin according to the distance of the place of the parochin out of the quhilk the said hors wes takin sall triple quadruple, or augment according to the severall parochins quhairthrow it sall happin him or thame to ryde. And gif the ryder have na moyen to satisfie the foirsaidis penalties proportionallie as is abouvewrittin he to be pwnischit in his persone effeirand to the offence and deid at the discretioun of the Judge. And quhasoever sall be tryet or fund to stow or cut ane uther mans hors taill the doer thairof sall be pwinischit as a theif at all rigour in exempill of utheris to commit the lyke."

This Act was frequently renewed. Acts were also passed regulating the right of grazing on the infield land. Regulations were even made for the scatholds, or hill pastures, as in the following decree, passed at Burrastow, Walls, Shetland :—

"Act anent wyld horses.

"The quhilk day (27th) June, 1617) it is statute and ordanit be the said Sherif deput with consent of the haill comonnes convenit at the said Court that ther sall be na wyld horses keepit conforme to ane Act maid of befoir and that na man sall put thair horsis without dykis uncloggit in tyme cuming fra the last day of Maij to the tyme the cornes be put in the yeard under the paine of XL s toties quoties as they sall be apprehendit or takin in the contrar."

REPRINT OF

A DESCRIPTION

OF THE

SHETLAND ISLANDS

COMPRISING AN ACCOUNT OF THEIR

SCENERY, ANTIQUITIES, AND SUPERSTITIONS,

BY

SAMUEL HIBBERT, M.D., F.R.S.E., &c.

PREFACE TO THE REPRINT:---

Hibbert's valuable work on Shetland having become very scarce, and accessible only to a limited few, the more interesting parts of the book (the geological section being omitted), were reprinted in the Shetland News in the course of 1890-91. A very general desire was expressed, when the proposal to reprint the book in the newspaper was announced, that at the same time an opportunity should be afforded to the public of procuring it in book form. Hence the issue of this volume. As it was not intended to reproduce the book in an expensive form, arrangements were not made for including the plates and maps which are given in the original, but as a specimen of the former, one page of the engravings has been reproduced in fac-simile, and the music of two native airs has been added. The spelling of the original has been adhered to throughout, and in other respects every effort has been made to produce an accurate reprint of the original volume.

A few copies are still on hand, and may be had from the Publishers and the Booksellers in the following Bindings :—

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

—:o:—

Glasgow Herald :—As the book now stands, it contains, in the first place, an interesting account of Hibbert's wanderings from island to island, together with descriptions of the general features and scenery of each of the group ; and it is to this, of course, that most space is devoted. But in addition there are to be found interspersed through the volume interesting sections dealing with the ancient jurisdiction of Shetland and with the peculiar system the udal tenure—under which certain lands are still held, and others containing quaint information with regard to the superstitions of the Shetland seas and to beliefs which still prevail (or at any rate prevailed in 1817) amongst the islanders. Altogether, the volume is so varied in its interesting contents that it cannot fail to be welcomed by a large circle of readers. The only thing which may, perhaps, be regretted is that the publishers have not attempted, by the addition of notes or otherwise, to indicate the progress which has been made even in Ultima Thule within the last 70 years, and of which the production of such a handsome and well-equipped volume as this by a Lerwick press is in itself a proof.

Scotsman :—The revival of the popular interest in local topography is pleasingly illustrated by the appearance of a reprint, issuing from Lerwick, of Hibbert's Description of the Shetland Islands. That work, which so long has held its place as a standard account of the group, and its scenery, antiquities, and superstitions, is now nearly seventy years old, and has only been accessible to those who have long purses. Much of its information is now obsolete, although from some points of view it has not on that account lost interest ; while much is of enduring value. Its chapters have lately been reprinted in a local journal, and in compliance with "a very general desire" the book has now been reproduced in a form which, while preserving the spelling and shape of the original, will place it within easy reach of those who desire to possess it.

John O'Groat Journal :—In every respect the work is one of great interest, and the Messrs Manson have done the re-issue excellent justice so for as printing, paper, and binding is concerned, all of which are as good as could possibly be desired, and creditable to the high-class workmanship of the firm.

Orcadian :—To meet the demand for this interesting book, it has been reprinted by Messrs T. & J. Manson, Lerwick. It is beautifully printed on toned paper, quarto size. The publishers deserve great praise for issuing such a valuable and handsome volume. Indeed the work is so well done it would do credit to any of the best publishing houses in London.

People's Journal :—In their execution of the work the Messrs Manson have left nothing to be desired. The handsome quarto volume in bevelled boards would do credit to any press in the country.

Scottish Geographical Magazine :—Hibbert's monumental work on the Shetland Islands is so well known as the standard work of reference for many questions connected with Ultima Thule, that any particular discussion of its contents is here unnecessary, and we may, accordingly, confine our remarks to the form and substance of this new edition. In the first place, it will be observed that the author's extensive notes on the geology of the islands are not included, nor is their absence very much to be regretted, for, although Dr Hibbert was a keen and accurate observer and investigator, yet the science of geology has advanced so fast and so far since 1822, when the first edition was produced by the Constables, that they are now consulted more out of curiosity than for information. The very valuable chapter on the Udallers has been retained, and will be found, taking it all in all, to be one of the best and clearest expositions extant of the peculiar land tenures of the Shetlands,—tenures which first came into use with the building of St Magnus Cathedral at Kirkwall by Jarl Rognvald, for which, and other good works, he was afterwards canonised. All the interesting matter treating of the scenery, antiquities, the people with their dress and quaint, Norse, old-world manners, customs, and language are given in full, with particulars of certain cases of witchcraft—not, by any means, the least instructive part of the work. The ministers of Orkney and Shetland were, at one time, celebrated above most others for their activity and for their relentless pursuit of the old women suspected of a knowledge of the black art. The references to this subject present us with a picture of credulity, superstition, and cruelty as dark and sad as it is strange and engrossing. Some of the original illustrations have been reproduced, but as they were not successful works of art in the first edition, neither do they come out well here. The positions occupied by the notes, too, are not well chosen, as they will naturally be looked for at the end of the volume, and not at the conclusion of each iter. But such faults are trifles, and need not be insisted upon at length. A word of high praise must be given to the publisher for the beauty of the whole volume, whether as regards the good type, tinted paper, wide margins, numerous fly-leaves, guiltless of advertisements—something to be thankful for, surely—or the rich, sober binding. The book, not only in contents, but in general appearance, will be a valuable acquisition to any library.

Shetland Times :—Beautifully printed on thick toned paper, and mounted in a very handsome binding.

British Printer :—Excellently printed in clear bold type.

DA LAST NOOST,

A SHETLAND FOLK SONG,

WRITTEN BY

L. J. NICOLSON,

SET TO MUSIC

(With Pianoforte Accompaniment)

BY

THOS. MANSON.

MRS SAXBY writes:—"DA LAST NOOST" is (I think) an unique production, but I devoutly pray it may not long remain so. I do not know of any other composition whose music and words are both by Hialtlanders; and these owning names so characteristic of the Old Rock as are the names of Laurence Nicolson and Thomas Manson. I cannot criticise this song. Its theme, its pathos, its associations, all touch me too closely to permit of my looking at it from any point but that of a Hialtlander in exile. I can only hope that native talent thus sweetly wedded will repeat itself, and that again and again there will be wafted from the Old Rock, songs such as this to awaken in our hearts old memories, old ties, old dreams, old hopes. There has never been any lack of poetic talent among the natives of Shetland, (or "Hialtland," as I ever love to call it), but our Isles have not produced many musicians, although the love of music amounts to a passion in our hearts, and most of our lads know how to wake the wild chords of the violin, with untaught, wonderful skill. Let us give thanks to Apollo for lending his lyre to Balder, and let us pray ever that the example of Mr Manson may be speedily followed by other Hialtlanders. Laurence Nicolson's songs are eminently fitted for being set to music, and it is to be desired that his verses could be made more available by publication in book form.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Scotsman:—T. & J. Manson, Lerwick, have sent out a quaint and charming Shetland Folk Song, written by L. J. Nicolson, composed by T. Manson, and entitled DA LAST NOOST—noost meaning the winter quarters of a Shetland boat. Both words and music have a quiet simplicity and pathos, and many plain suggestions of the sea.

People's Journal:—The pathetic song called "Da last Noost," written by L. J. Nicolson, has been set to appropriate and plaintive music by Thomas Manson. The prevailing sadness of the piece demands that it should be cast in the minor mode, and the composer has succeeded in giving the mournful phrases an original turn, without interfering with the character of the song. The work is published both in staff and sol-fa notations by Messrs T. & J. Manson, Lerwick.

Orcadian:—This is the title of a new Shetland folk-song, the words of which are by L. J. Nicolson, and the music by Mr Thos. Manson. The words are very pretty, but the music, though eminently suited to the sentiment, would not prove very attractive, we are afraid, to large public gatherings. In social circles it will be popular, and will charm many a Shetlander both at home and abroad. The publishers are Messrs T. & J. Manson, Lerwick.

People's Friend:—Such is the title of a Shetland folk song, by Laurence J. Nicolson, to which Thomas Manson has written a sympathetic and sweet melody. It is published with piano accompaniments by T. & J. Manson, Lerwick, at 6d.

John O'Groat Journal:—This is the title of a rather pathetic song issued by Messrs T. & J. Manson, Shetland News Office, Lerwick, the words of which are by L. J. Nicolson and the music by Thomas Manson. Words and music match well, and the composer has exhibited some originality in the setting of the verses. It is beautifully printed on hand-made paper and does credit to the firm as printers.

Orkney Herald:—Mr L. J. Nicolson's pathetic rendering of a Shetland boatman's address to his old boat, lying in the last "noost," has been set to music by Mr Thomas Manson, who has well caught the spirit of the piece, and it is now published by Messrs T. & J. Manson, Lerwick, in both notations.

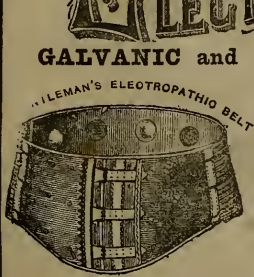
An Appeal to Invalids

The best Remedy for WEA™ and LANGUID FEELINGS, Nervous Exhaustion, Brain Fag, Debility, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Impaired Vitality, Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Hysteria, Kidney Diseases, &c., is NATURE'S GREAT RESTORER—ELECTRICITY—which may be imperceptibly applied to the system by wearing

Mr. C. B. HARNESS'

ELECTROPATHIC BELT

GALVANIC and FARADIC. (By Royal Letters Patent.)



This perfect health-appliance is light and comfortable to wear, has been in use for nearly a quarter of a century, and may be relied on to speedily invigorate the most debilitated constitution. It is constructed on strictly scientific principles, so that they do not convey any shock or unpleasant feeling to the system.

DEBILITY.

Mr. DICK MCKAY, 27, Arline Street, Hackney Road, E., writes April 4th, 1891: "My brother sent me one of your Electropathic Belts while I was performing in the provinces. I had been a sufferer from nervousness for some years, but since wearing the appliances I have been myself again, sustaining long and trying parts without feeling the least affected."

HYSTERIA.

Miss M. SANDWELL, 9, Selborne Villas, Manningham, Bradford, writes March 15th, 1891: "I am pleased to say that since wearing your Electropathic Belt my health is much better, and I have not felt any pain in my back, nor so much of the bearing-down pain. I am also glad to say I have not had a sick headache. I feel very thankful indeed that I procured the Belt."

THE HONEY OF WISDOM!!!

We gather the Honey of Wisdom from THORNS, NOT FROM FLOWERS.

"FRUIT SALT" is the best known remedy; it removes foetid or poisonous matter (the ground-work of disease) from the blood by natural means, allays nervous excitement, depression, and restores the nervous system to its proper condition. Use ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." It is pleasant, cooling, refreshing, and invigorating. You cannot overstate its great value in keeping the blood pure and free from disease.

IMPORTANT TO ALL LEAVING HOME FOR A CHANGE.—Don't go without a bottle of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." It ought to be kept in every bed-room, in readiness for any emergency. It prevents DIARRHŒA, and removes it in the early stages.

INFLUENZA.—Instructions:—When attacked with Influenza or Feverish Cold, lie in bed three or four days in a warm room well ventilated by a good fire, take ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" freely, and ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO" as occasion may require. After a few days the marked symptoms will pass away. As a Preservative of Nervous Force, or as a Recuperative Diet, use Scalded Milk.

CAUTION.—Examine each bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation. Sold by all Chemists. Prepared only at ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, London, S.E., by J. C. ENO'S PATENT.

NOBILITY OF LIFE.

"Who best can suffer, best can do."—MILTON.

What alone Enables us to draw a Just Moral from the Tale of Life?

"Were I asked what best dignifies the present and concentrates the past; what alone enables us to draw a just moral from the TALE of Life; what sheds the PUREST LIGHT UPON OUR REASON; what gives the firmest strength to our religion; what is best fitted to SOFTEN THE HEART of man and elevate his soul—I would answer, with Lassues, it is 'EXPERIENCE.'"—LORD LYTTON.

"QUEEN'S HEAD HOTEL, NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE,
"June 4th, 1887

"SIR,—Will you to-day allow me to present you with this Testimonial and Poem on ENO'S justly celebrated "FRUIT SALT"? My occupation being a very sedentary one, I came here to see what change of air would do for me, and, as the wish of some personal friends, I have taken your "FRUIT SALT," and the good result therefrom is my reason for addressing you.—I am, Sir, yours truly, A LADY."

"The Appetite it will enforce,
And help the system in its course;
Perhaps you've ate or drank too much;
It will restore like magic touch.
Depression with its fearful sway,
It drives electric-like away;
And if the Blood is found impure,
It will effect a perfect cure.

"Free from danger, free from harm,
It acts like some magician's charm;
At any time a dainty draught,
Which will dispel disease's shaft;
More priceless than the richest gold,
That ever did its wealth unfold;
And all throughout our native land
Should always have it at command."

Superior to all other Salines.—"DEAR SIR,—Having been in the habit of taking your "Fruit Salt" for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it in the house, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—namely, it is pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but, apart from the publication of that, you are welcom to make use of this testimonial if it is of service. —A DEVONSHIRE LADY. — Jan. 25th, 1889."

The King of Physicians—Pure Air.

Jeopardy of Life, the Great Danger of Vitiated Air.—"Former generations perished in venial ignorance of all sanitary laws. When Black Death massacred Hundreds of Thousands, neither the victims nor their rulers could be accounted responsible for their slaughter."—Times.

After breathing impure air for two minutes and a half every drop of blood is more or less poisoned. There is not a point in the human frame but has been traversed by poisonous blood; not a point but must have suffered injury. ENO'S
